

Tackling such topics as death and religion, politics and history, art and women in his poetry collection Cats Creep the Fire to Art, Matthew Ward explores the spiritual and the mundane melding the metaphysical with the metaphorical. His poems transcend the reality of their literal settingâ€”the church, a Catholic school room, suburbia, a city street, etcâ€”to reveal more, what is deep within or on the surface, but overlooked. With staccato control he creates verse that is both stark and stunning; his words spark.--Trace Sheridan 34th Parallel Magazine
Matthew Ward lives & writes in his native Newcastle, Australia. In 2004, his story, Jake With A Snarly Smile On His Chops was published as a novella by Independence Jones (Australia). In late 2006 World Audience (USA) published his short story anthology, Her Mouth Looked Like a Cats Bum to critical acclaim. His short stories have appeared in several magazines, printed as well as online. Ditto, his articles â€” both serious & satirical. He even had poetry published in the 90s! While wearing his publishing cape he created the popular Skive Magazine, now entering its frenetic 5th year. He dreams of writing the great Australian novel; failing that, the great American one.
