

This publication is the outcome of a course of lectures the author happened to deliver to a University Class on Psychology. Limitations of time obliged the author to confine himself to a discussion only of the fundamental principles. This is why some details which generally find a place in a systematic exposition of Psychology do not appear here. The work is an attempt to present in a simple and clear way the essential principles of Psychology, If it serves this purpose, and enables the student to acquire an interest in the subject, the authors trouble will be more than repaid. The author has great pleasure in acknowledging his indebtedness to the writings of Professors Ward, Stout, and James. S. R. (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and dont occur in the book.)
