

Alessa Lorenzo is a young cook who travels the world in search of new eats and adventure. From South East Asia to Europe to the United States, Alessa travels without a map and without a guidebook, choosing instead to follow her own feet. She goes where the road takes her and explores cities in search of its true identity. Like one of the ever-young lost boys in Peter Pan, she takes the road less travelled and she turns to the child within herself to see different places with wonder and always with a fresh perspective. With the constant urge to move to the next place, she has found herself in just about the remotest corners of every city and has eaten some of the best and the cheapest food the world has to offer. Like a true lost girl, Alessa never stays too long in one place. She looks to the horizon for the next adventure and stays true to her wandering spirit. This edition is an account of her travels in one of Asia's fast-paced cities – Singapore.
