

From the writer of the Life is a Beautiful Thing series comes a short story collection that explores the depths of human delusion, both good and bad. In My Machine Doll, a Japanese man confesses his love for an android he picked up at an electronic store in Akihabara. In Zombie Lolita, a hopeful writer gets a letter from The New Yorker which turns out to be a Nigerian scam. The Updated Elders Pocket Companion is a spoof of the Elders Pocket Companion, a founding document of Mormonism that provides instructions for marrying someone who has already died (seriously). In Thank You, Mr. Tiger, a celebrity dons a tiger costume for a breath of fresh air at a local fair, getting more than he bargained for once a child falls into a fountain. In Blogging the Muse, an Austin bloggers bizarre morning rituals are exposed. The Attar of Roses is a magical piece about a premature birth and a mysterious vial of rose oil. Serious at times, laugh out loud funny at others, this collection is a quick and fun. No political satire here -- just storytelling with a heart.
